

TRAINING ANNOUNCEMENT

Preventing and Countering Radicalisation and Violent Extremism in the MENA Region: Strengthening Environmental Resilience

15-16 December
ONLINE

Languages: English and Arabic (with simultaneous interpretation)

Building the capacity of practitioners, policymakers, and researchers to address radicalisation and violent extremism remains a key priority across the MENA region. To support this, the EU Knowledge Hub on Prevention of Radicalisation will host an awareness-raising online training focused on enhancing the resilience of local communities against radicalisation and violent extremism.

The course is designed to broaden the pool of practitioners, policymakers, and researchers working on PCVE in the region, equipping newcomers with the knowledge and skills needed to contribute effectively to strengthening community resilience.

WHAT WILL YOU LEARN

By the end of this training, participants will be able, among other, to:

- Recall the basic concepts of radicalisation processes and the main principles of PCVE
- Identify key risk factors and early signs of radicalisation
- Describe EU strategies for the prevention of radicalisation, including the role of the EU Knowledge Hub (EUKH) in fostering EU–MENA partnerships
- Explain the importance of early prevention and building social resilience
- Present the role of collaboration among local stakeholders in PCVE efforts

TRAINING CONTENT OVERVIEW

The training will cover:

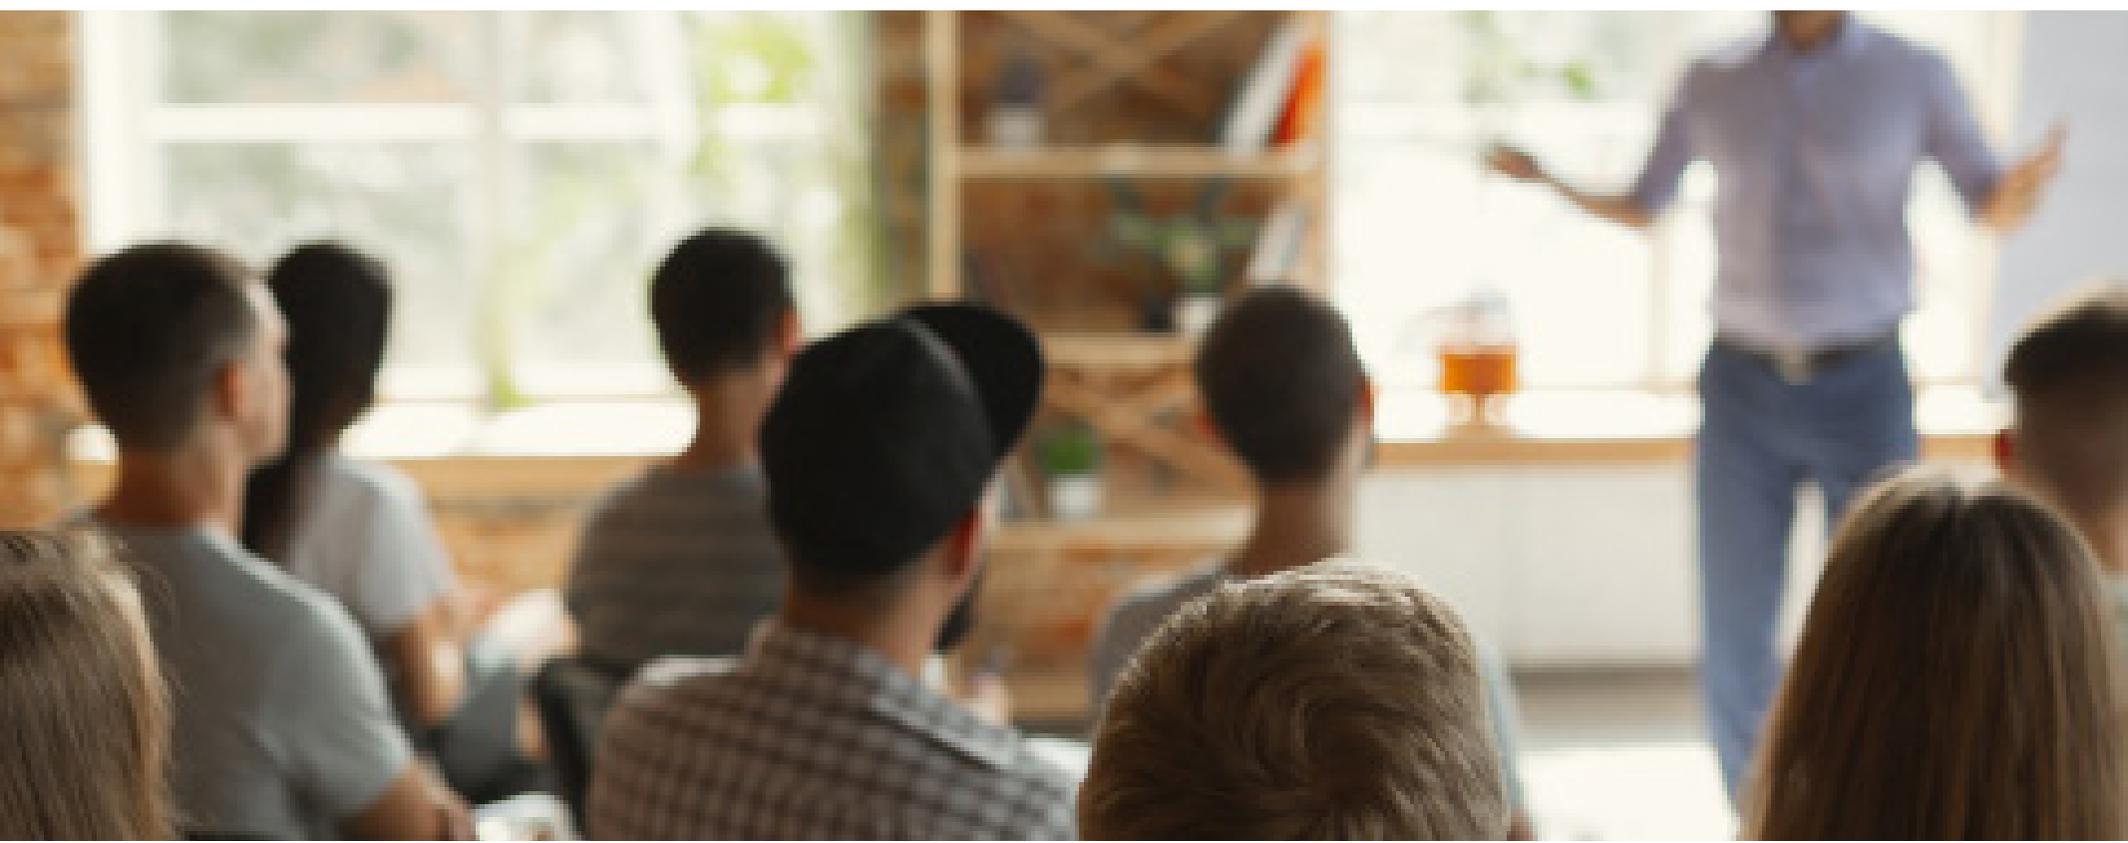

- Types, processes, and drivers of radicalisation and violent extremism, with a focus on current trends in the MENA region
- Early signs and manifestations of radicalisation – how to identify and address them effectively
- EU and MENA approaches to prevention, including key EU strategies, the Barcelona Declaration, and the role of the EU Knowledge Hub
- Protective factors and practical strategies for building community resilience
- Levels of prevention (primary, secondary, tertiary) and approaches to countering radicalisation
